

Who Benefits from Family & Community Connections?

Students

When programs focus tightly on academic needs, the result can be better support for student academic efforts, leading to increased achievement gains.

Families

When outreach programs address specific family needs, the result can be successful parent involvement in student learning, positive family-school staff interactions, and improved individual skills and knowledge.

Schools

When programs focus on key learning targets, the result can be higher student achievement, positive teacher-student interactions, and additional resources.

Community

When programs seek to address family needs, the result can be additional resources for the community and its families and more efficient outreach efforts.

Who Benefits from Family & Community Connections?

Students

- ⇒ Additional support for learning and personal development.
- ⇒ Increased academic achievement.

Families

- ⇒ Access to additional resources to support for family needs.
- ⇒ Knowledge of how to help children academically.
- ⇒ Positive family-school interactions.
- ⇒ Opportunities for learning parenting and life skills.

Schools

- ⇒ Additional support for increasing student achievement.
- ⇒ Positive perception of school staff, efforts, and programs.
- ⇒ Access to additional resources for school improvement efforts.

Community

- ⇒ Access to and development of additional resources and clients.
- ⇒ Additional support for existing outreach programs.